Brad established a place for himself in Player Development when he co-founded the Arnold Palmer Golf Academies with the King of Golf, Arnold Palmer, his childhood idol and mentor.

Corporations such as Wyndham Vacation Resorts, Tupperware, Payne-Webber, Credit Union National, Gulfstream, Forbes, Office Depot, Fannie Mae, Microsoft and Cooper Tire to name a few, enlist Brad and his Professionals to provide Executive Golf Education in their effort to effectively use golf as a tool to forge business relationships with their most valued clients, for game improvement, team building activities, motivation and entertainment.

A PGA class-A Professional, Brad successfully competed on the AustralAsian PGA Tour and Hogan/Nike Tours, developed the training curriculum for high performance juniors at Saddlebrook Preparatory and applies these experiences to his teaching and coaching. Brad was awarded the North Florida PGA Teacher of the Year and inducted as a Top 100 Teacher in America by Golf Magazine. Brad was recently selected as Director of Instruction for The Golf Channel's online Golf Academy. Author of My Golf Journal, Golf for Everybody, and the soon to be released, Mentored by the King.

Brad's dedication to teaching and growing the game of golf comes from his lifelong relationship with Arnold Palmer. He continues to learn from his friendship and coaching relationships with several PGA and LPGA teaching and playing professionals, including: Ian Baker-Finch, Bradley Hughes, Sandra Palmer, Scott Hoch, Robert and Patrick Damron, Aimee Cho, Ted Purdy, Aram Cho and Ed Moses.

Brad shares his expertise in golf development as an advisory staff member with TaylorMade-adidas, Kallassey Sports, and the PGA of America's President's Council. He combined his passion for teaching on traditional green grass with distance learning through the Internet, being involved in the startup golf technology company, eCoaching Technology, Inc.
